The Nevada Department of Public Safety Recognizes Dispatchers During National Public Safety Telecommunicators Week

Nevada- National Public Safety Telecommunicators (npstw.org) week is recognized the second week of April, honoring the men and women who respond to emergency calls, dispatch emergency officials and equipment, and render life-saving assistance.

"The Nevada Department of Public Safety is proud to honor our dedicated Dispatchers," said Director James Wright. "They are the first line of support to Nevada citizens and visitors who call in for help, communicating vital information to Troopers, Officers and First Responders. We are thankful every day for these heroes who often work behind the scenes to provide life-saving assistance."

Public Safety Dispatchers with the Nevada Department of Public Safety respond to emergency calls from citizens, emergency, and routine radio traffic from Nevada Highway Patrol (NHP) Troopers, Parole and Probation Officers, and other State and law enforcement/criminal justice entities.
